

Bentham Crouwel

Bridges Buitenwater IJburg, Amsterdam

Between the city centre of IJburg, Amsterdam's new town, and the 'Old Land' lies Rieteland, built on with villas. Four bridges, two for cars and two for bicycles, provide opening up and are members of one family. Slender, but strong steel constructions leap over the water and skim over the reedy borders of the IJsselmeercoast. The bridges are pre-fabricated and the infrastructure of the mains is integrated in the sidewalks.

Client

Gemeentelijk Grondbedrijf Amsterdam

Architect

Bentham Crouwel Architecten

Length

50m - 180m

Start design

1999

Start construction

1999

Completion

2003